

In Memory of Philip Cannistraro

Luca Delbello (November 04, 2011)

Professor Anthony Julian Tamburri, Dean of the John D. Calandra Italian American Institute, met with i-Italy to talk about the conference in honor of the late historian Philip Cannistraro: New Directions in Italian and Italian-American History.

Philip Cannistraro was a prominent figure in Italian American studies, his brilliant research on Fascism and his political implications, both in Italy and in the US, remain well known internationally in the academic field.

The Dean of the John D. Calandra Italian American Institute [2], Professor Anthony Julian Tamburri, explained to us the reason behind the conference his Institute is having to honor the memory of Philip Cannistraro and talked about his legacy and importance as an Italian American scholar and historian.

These are his words...

The conference that we're having in honor of Philip Cannistraro is first of all to honor Philip Cannistraro because he died too young at 63.

He was our distinguished professor of Italian American studies, he's known mostly for being a scholar of Italian Fascism, but he also studied the relations between Italian Americans and Italy and also the Italian Americans and their relation to Fascist Italy.

That's the first thing. The second thing is that Philip Cannistraro, as opposed to many other people especially in Italian American studies, has left a legacy.

All nine presenters at this conference, all nine professors are basically all students of Philip Cannistraro, or at least the majority.

So he created a school, "ha fatto scuola", and he left a wonderful legacy.

Ernesto Ialongo and William Adams, the people who really put this conference together, the coordinators, they're going to put a book together, the essays of the presentation, so there will be a publication that will have full-fledged essays of the presentation.
