Nicole Campisano (May 23, 2018)

In collaboration with Istituto Luce Cinecittà, the Film Society of Lincoln Center is presenting Open Roads: New Italian Cinema. Showcasing a wide variety of genres, this film festival will be screening Italian contemporary films, along with exciting question and answer sessions with directors and actors from May 31- June 6.

From comedies to dramas, this year's Open Roads: New Italian Cinema [2] is featuring 17 Italian films. From May 31 until June 6, viewers will have the chance to see this exclusive lineup of contemporary selections! For the 18th edition of this festival, many of the filmmakers and a few actors will be making appearances during the showing of their films for question and answer sessions. Sicilian Ghost Story, the winner of the David di Donatello award for Best Adapted Screenplay, will open the showcase.

Classic and Contemporary

Open Roads will also be adding classic films into the mix by the Taviani brothers, Paolo and Vittorio [3], and Marco Ferrer [4]. Unfortunately, Vittorio Taviani passed away this April, but his incredible contributions to film will always be remembered. Paolo and Vittorio's 1982 classic, Night of the Shooting Stars, which also won the Cannes Film Festival's Grand Jury Prize, will be shown June 4.

Ferreri's The Ape Woman (1962) will be presented June 5 with an introduction by Anselma Dell'Olio. Dell'Olio is an Italian film critic and journalist who created the documentary, Marco Ferreri: Dangerous but Necessary, about Ferreri's radical legacy which will screen before The Ape Woman.
